Kathleen Moyer & Josiah Osibodu, CPA, are excited to announce the launch of Moyer & Osibodu, a consulting firm specializing in providing unclaimed property services to companies in industries, such as manufacturing, retail, insurance, healthcare, pharmaceutical, financial services, technology, media and telecommunications. Due to increased State enforcement of their unclaimed property laws, corporations need to know how to navigate through complicated regulations, potential audit assessments and other inherent accounting issues related to unclaimed property compliance. Moyer & Osibodu will provide clients with comprehensive one-on-one consulting services to meet all of their unclaimed property needs.

Unclaimed Property includes intangible personal property (e.g. uncashed checks, outstanding customer credits or deposits, unredeemed gift cards) that has gone unclaimed by its rightful owner after a specified period of time. When the owner cannot be located, States' Unclaimed Property Laws require companies to report the personal property to the state of owner's last known address or, if there is no last known address, to the company's state of incorporation.

Moyer & Osibodu have combined their more than 50 years of experience to provide clients with comprehensive unclaimed property service offerings. Their services include unclaimed property audit assistance, voluntary disclosures, annual compliance and reporting, design and implementation of policies and procedures, accounting process improvement and change management, as well as in-house unclaimed property training.

Kathleen Moyer has specialized in the field of unclaimed property since 1984, assisting major corporations with their annual unclaimed property compliance reporting, as well as, developing and implementing unclaimed property policies and procedures. She also managed various multistate unclaimed property audit defenses for her clients. Kathleen is a frequent speaker at unclaimed property seminars around the country and has co-authored numerous articles on unclaimed property compliance.

Josiah Osibodu, CPA, has over 23 years of industry, public accounting and state experience. He assists companies across various industries with their multistate unclaimed property audit defense and voluntary disclosure initiative, in addition to negotiating unclaimed property exposure with state administrators on behalf of his clients. Josiah also assists companies with their unclaimed property risk assessment reviews, implementation of unclaimed property policies and procedures, and unclaimed property due diligence review during mergers and acquisitions. Josiah has co-authored several published articles in prestigious finance journals and he is a frequent speaker on the topic of unclaimed property.
